Higher Education Learning Outcomes

The M.Ed. in Higher Education curriculum allows you to choose from the following emphases:

- › Administration—if you want to pursue a career or career advancement in a wide variety of administrative and staff support areas in colleges and universities
- › Student Engagement—if you want to work in areas specifically related to students in colleges and universities
- › Institutional Research—if you seek a career in data analysis and research within colleges and universities
- › Fundraising Leadership—if you are interested in philanthropy and donor relations in a collegiate setting

Each area of professional practice is designed to provide the scholarly course work and practical experiences that you need to qualify for an entry-level professional staff position and career advancement in fields of higher education.

Upon your completion of this program, you should be able to:

- › critically evaluate higher education as a field of study, appreciating its history, diversity, and global context
- › utilize research and data to effectively assess current challenges facing higher education institutions
- › skillfully address audience, purpose, and context in professional and scholarly communication, and use appropriate writing skills and media in oral presentations
- › collaborate with others and use critical self-reflection skills to clarify personal values for leading and decision-making
- › become a lifelong learner in this field
- › construct a learning and career portfolio for ongoing professional development and reflective practice

“My favorite thing about being an M.Ed. in Higher Education student was that I was able to choose courses that interested me. I initially took a public health course because I really wanted to work in student affairs or student health services. But I was able to later make different course selections that reflected other interests and made the program my own.”

Why Penn State?

Collaboration

This online program is a collaboration between Penn State World Campus and Penn State's College of Education. The partnership connects you with renowned faculty who can help you further develop your skills in secondary education.

Flexibility and convenience

Penn State knows that adults need flexible learning options to continue meeting their professional and personal commitments. You can take courses when you please, earning your degree at your own pace.

Is this online program the real Penn State?

Yes. Penn State World Campus was launched in 1998 as Penn State's virtual campus administered online. It has since grown into one of the most highly regarded online campuses—extending Penn State's reach across the world. No distinction will be made on your official Penn State diploma that your courses were completed at a distance.

How long will it take to complete the degree?

You can apply to start taking courses in any semester and take those courses as your personal and professional schedules permit. However, most students will complete the master's program within two to three years and the certificate in two to three semesters.

Can I obtain financial aid?

Penn State realizes that one of the greatest challenges of returning to school is the cost. That's why our student support teams have been trained to help you make the most of the financial aid options and opportunities available to you. Reputation

Penn State is universally regarded as one of the finest educational institutions in the United States. Putting a Penn State degree or certificate on your résumé is a great way to prove to current and potential employers that you are a well-educated professional.

“In one of my classes, we were required to interview people and explore different career opportunities that we might be interested in. After working on those assignments, I no longer felt like I was studying online by myself; I knew that I was interacting and working directly with my classmates.”
